

Hint for Problem 86-f

You have an inequality involving  $m$  and  $n$  that tells you that  $R(n, n) > m$ . Suppose you could work with that inequality in order to show that if the inequality holds, then  $m$  is bigger than something. What could you conclude about  $R(n, n)$ ?